

Abstract for:

Open Letter Electronic Influencing Intercommunication System.

The Open Letter Electronic Influencing Intercommunication System, invention known commonly as Open-Letters, through its newly developed interactive computer method over the Internet is here described. It uniquely combines the ability to rapidly collect and compile data over the Internet in order to bring the results of its assimilation and analysis together more rapidly through the use of an electronic computer system to influence another individual more effectively, capably and economically through its action –together with the use of a previously know process, such as in the instant case is commonly known as an Open Letter to the Editor of a newspaper. The inventor makes three claims for his method.